“Nuclear weapons are the last thing most people think about—until the day something goes wrong and nobody thinks about anything else. The Two Futures Project exists to make sure that day never comes.”

Tyler Wigg-Stevenson founded the Two Futures Project to help the American church witness and work for a world free of nuclear weapons. An ordained minister with a decade of experience in nuclear weapons issues, Tyler’s Christian journey started with his conversion in a hotel service stairwell (long story) shortly after college. Tyler writes and speaks regularly about faith and culture: he is the author of Brand Jesus: Christianity in a Consumerist Age, contributing editor at Sojourners, politics columnist at Relevant, and has written for publications including Christianity Today, YouthWorker Journal, and the Christian Science Monitor. Prior to founding 2FP, Tyler served as Study Assistant to John Stott. Tyler and his wife, Natalie, live in Nashville, where they are active members of First Baptist Church.
